

Salah Jameel Jabrael is a Lecturer in the English Department at Soran University, where he has been a staff member since 2009 and has held the position of lecturer since 2013. He has extensive experience in teaching, research, and academic service within the university.

His academic specialisation is General Linguistics, encompassing both Applied and Pure Linguistics. His specific areas of expertise include Semantics, Pragmatics, Rhetoric and Stylistics (as an interdisciplinary field combining Linguistics and Literature), Discourse Analysis, and Sociolinguistics. His teaching and research focus on language, meaning, and discourse in academic and social contexts.

In addition to teaching, Salah Jameel Jabrael has made significant contributions to academic administration and service. He served as Manager of the Library in the Faculty of Education at Soran University for three years, supporting academic resources and learning. Since 2024, he has been a committee member involved in the assessment and evaluation of MA and PhD students' academic progress.

Salah Jameel Jabrael has published approximately ten research papers, both independently and in collaboration with co-researchers, in the fields of linguistics and English language studies.

He obtained his Bachelor's degree in English from the English Department, Salahaddin University in 2005, his Master's degree in Language and Linguistics from Sheffield Hallam University, United Kingdom, in 2013, and his PhD in Linguistics from the English Department, Faculty of Arts, Soran University, which was awarded on March 16, 2024.

Salah Jameel Jabrael continues to contribute actively to teaching, research, and academic development, supporting the mission and academic standards of Soran University, participated in different Local and Domestic Conferences.